

NACMS Intern Sought

The North American Center for Marianist Studies (NACMS) is now accepting applications for its internship. The Intern will work at The Marianist Center in Philadelphia, PA. The position is open to both lay Marianists and vowed religious.

Internship applicants should be available to work 40 hours a week. Some evening and weekend work is probable. Compensation includes salary and benefits. The first year will run from September 1, 2008, and conclude August 31, 2009. Given satisfactory performance during the first year, a second year of internship is available and preferred.

The intern will be mentored by NACMS staff for studies in Marianist history, Marianist spirituality, and the interface between things Marianist and contemporary Church and culture.

This is a great opportunity to build or bolster understanding of Marianist life. Interns also have the chance to share their gifts and talents with the Marianist world. Past interns have assisted with presenting Marianist programs, editing, writing, and researching.

To obtain the application, to see the job description, and to view the type of activities typically part of the internship, go to www.nacms.org and click on Internship.

Deadline to apply for the Internship is Thursday, July 3.

Please contact Carol Ramey, NACMS director, with questions. She can be reached at Carol.Ramey@notes.udayton.edu or at 937/429-2521.

NACMS is a heritage center that serves the Marianist world through providing programs, publications, research, and resources to the comprehensive Marianist Family.
